

WAITRESS WINS; OR, HEARTS ALL BEAT FOR FAIR EVELYN

On Way to Get Married She Pickets a Restaurant Strike—
Oh, Pshaw! What's the Use?

Further evidence that the world is upside down and the times out of joint is furnished by D. J. Capld, celebrated archer, who appears to be having his own troubles.

Evelyn Suda, of No. 228 East 53d Street, waitress in an East 23d Street restaurant, arraigned this morning in Yorkville Court on a charge of disorderly conduct, told a story that touched even the calloused hearts of police court habitués.

"In 1917," said the young woman, "she is pretty, too—I was to have been married to Daniel Kauffman, the tall, dark, handsome young man sitting there at the end of the third row."

"Yes, yes, go on," said the Court, "you interest me strangely."

"Well—I don't quite know how to tell it—Joe Suda came along and we eloped."

"You and Kauffman?"

"Suda and I. Then Suda went off to the war—and he never came back. My widowhood came to the attention of Dan—Mr. Kauffman—who had been loving me all the time in his heart and he began calling upon me again."

"Again we set a date for our wedding. It was to have taken place three months ago. The morning of our wedding day arrived and a member of Mr. Kauffman's family died. Another postponement."

"The charge in this complaint," interrupted the Magistrate, "is that this morning you forcefully endeavored to restrain and did restrain patrons of the restaurant in question from approaching the matrimonial coffee, rolls and two soft-boiled. What do you say to that?"

"We were on our way to the Municipal Building this morning," continued the charming young defendant, "when we happened to pass the restaurant where I have been employed. A strike is on. One of the pickets has overstepped. The girls asked me to lend a hand, and—Oh, Judge, please let me go! If I lose him this time something terrible will befall me!"

You get some idea of how strong the appeal was when you learn that seven men who had been kept out of the restaurant by pickets and who, therefore, were still without a breakfast (no married woman will believe this), broke down, wept in chorus, relented, withdrew their complaints and refused to prosecute.

"Go," said the Magistrate, benignly addressing our heroine and her beloved, "go, and may good luck attend you."

The story ought to tell that they are married, give the name of the officiating clergyman, mention Washington or Niagara Falls and tell where they are going to start their battles, but it's a darn long way from 23d Street to the Church of St. Michael, with antipodesdominances darting hither and thither, other restaurant strikes in progress and hold-up men on every second corner. So there's no telling.

FAVOR VISCOUNTESS ASTOR.

Plymouth Believes She Will Be Elected to House of Commons.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Viscountess Astor's victory in Plymouth seems to be taken for granted. Her popularity is undoubted and she is a highly effective public speaker.

Some legal authorities question her eligibility as the wife of a peer, but as that status is merely one of courtesy and as it does not disable her from voting for a Parliamentary candidate, the weight of opinion is greatly in her favor. Not only would she be the first woman returned to Parliament but she would be in the position of having a husband in the House of Lords at the same time that she is in the House of Commons and having precedence as a peeress over herself as a Member of Parliament.

The campaign opens Monday and it will absorb political interest while it lasts.

Viscountess Sees "Evilcat" Behind "Pawfoot Candidate" Talk.

PLYMOUTH, Oct. 29.—Frank Hawker, Chairman of the Conservative Party, to-day received the following telegram from Lady Astor:

"I have neither been asked to stand as a pawfoot candidate (for her husband's seat in Parliament) nor have I the intention of doing so. It seems to me that I detect the claws of some other sort of envious cat in this misleading suggestion."

HOW BIG IS A DOG?

That is, an "Ordinary Dog?"—Stone of Winsted Please Write.

NEWTON, N. J., Oct. 29.—What is said to be the first wildcat ever captured alive in Sussex County, is on exhibition in the window of a hardware store here. Fred Benson, a hunter, came upon the cat while it was swimming in a pool. He threw a bag over it. The wildcat is as large as an ordinary dog.
